Teaching the Dumb to Speak

Of all the many advances in education which were shown at the Chicago exhibition, none were more striking than Praise II m, vechildren of weckness and death those ilustrating the methods of teaching speech to the dumb. I veryone has neud of Helen Keller the little blind and deaf gul, who had be used through the sense of touch done all that children of her age usually know with the ud of the senses of touch, sight and he ming. They have heard also that she woke out of her sound sleep to throw off has learned to interpret vocal sounds if their soft white coverlid and empty the not to actually he it and even to speak, warm sunshine. Then the farmers, who though the sound of her own voice is are special friends of hers, drove the i entucly insudible to lici. Her case, iron plows over her until she felt quite which may be classed almost among the cut up. One little field rebelled modern miracles, is exceptional, but and resolved to be is hard and stonythere are hundreds it not thousands of hearted as possible but after a hitle children born damb who now speak with | coloring, she grew quite soft and yield thmost perfect fluency and accuracy ing. Winter Vegetables. It is time now for that cheerful filling of cellars which presages Thanksgiving. and makes the genuine country home some of the best blessings of lifeplenty, variety, household comfort, the winters's shelter and the winter's cheer. A good stock of winter vegetables fills a large place in this homely but comfortable work of preparation, for without these the housewife finds it impossible to keep up to her proper standard of wholesome and agreeable variety and completeness in the family diet. Health and efficiency depend too immediately upon the good supply to allow of any negligence in this respect. The natural craving of the system will usnal y make sure of more meat in cold weather, but the due proportion of succulent vegetable food, without which the health is certain to suffer, must depend upon wise foresight. Where from an unfavorable season or other causes the home supply is straitened, it is exceedingly desirable to call in stores from other sources. The ordinary vegetables and their cost should not be counted a an extra, but compared advantageously with the price of meat and bread, in considering the economy of an ampl and varied supply. Aside from the regular dinner disl

of vegetables, it is necessary to provide for soups and stews, those invaluable sources of appetizing and comforting nourishment in cold weather. For this purpose onions and carrots are indis pensable, celery is a treasure in itself, box of parsley growing in the kitche window is worth many times its cost it must be bought at the gardener's and there is hardly a known variety winter vegetables that may not b brought into acceptable use. The one secret in using vegetables in cooking o this kind is skill in combination-a prime must overpower the others so as to give an impression of something too much, but there must be a fragrant, rich and mellow whole. My old cooking-school teache used to repeat his usual formula of "one onion with two cloves stuck in it, one carrot, one parsnip, one bay leaf, a bunch of fine herbs," and then, spreading out his hands with an expressive jesture-"whatever clse you have!" Carrots give richness and body as well as flavor and sweetness, and are too little appreciated in ordinary cooking. Canned and dried vegetables are exceedingly useful in adding to the resources of the cook, and corn and tomatoes as wel as peas and beans in some form cannot well be spared. Fortunate the housekeeper whose cellar and storeroom are amply garnished with these stores,-Country Gentleman. MANAGING A DAIRY FARM.—The business of dairying should not be mixed with other branches of farming, but should be made a specialty. The farm can then be laid out in three equal fields for the three-year rotation—clover, corn and wheat. Any portions of the satus undesirable for cultivation can be seeded to permanent grasses for pasturing young stock, dry cows, etc. The tillable portions of the farm, then will furnish clover for lay, corn for ensitage, wheat for a money crop and the straw for bedding. The wheat money can be reinvested on the farm, in the shape of wheat bran or oil meal, which will make the business self sustaining, and give, with the sale of surplus stock, a source of income which is constant and reliable. All fertility remains where it belongs, on the farm, and like the widow's oil its hidden resources are ever ready to respond to proper demands. -Colman's Rural World The theory of breeding is based of a few natural laws. One of these is that the cow not only produces after her kind, but within the laws of her own genus and species she call of similar shape, form, quality and A PERSON cannot expect to do every thing and do it as well as the requirements demand. The time was when the farmer boasted of the number of acres he had under cultivation, but now it is more, how many bushels he can raise to the acre and of the high state of cultivation of his farm. THE farmer necessarily lives so much in the future that plans for work must be laid out months in advance, and during the year note is to be taken for necessary work as soon as the crops are gathered in. The soil cannot do its share in producing crops if it is wet .-American Dairyman,

Ir you want to send those pigs along toward early maturity add a listle oil meal to their slop. A little of it in connection with other grain will help them right along. Do not make the mistake of feeding them very much of it, for it is too expensive a food to use in that way, and does not bring the best results either, if made a main article of diet. The most valuable horse to a user of horses is the one that will do him the greatest amount of work at the least expense. Such a horse may be a diminutive pony, a speedy trotter, a general purpose horse or a ponderous draft horse, all depending upon the requirements of the owner.

A GRASS farm is a nice thing to manage, and if properly managed it usually gives satisfactory results. Baled hay is as saleable a commodity as grain and it is also one for which you do not have to rely upon a home market. Compact. ly put up it can be shipped a long distance very cheaply.

IRREGULARITY in milking does more damage to cows than many persons are aware of, and the same holds true as regards feeding. To secure the best results there should be as little excitement as possible, and all reasonable care taken to milk, feed, water and care for the cows at regular hours. To have the cattle well housed for winter it is not requisite that you have costly structures. It is a fact that some men can house a given amount of stock better in a barn costing $500 than another could in a barn costing stole that and all matters connected with stool.

About Cultivating Orchards. The diverse treatment which orchards eceive throughout the country affords lesson showing the great benefit of iving them the best management, and the loss from neglected treatment Seglect is too common, and poor crops and scabby fruit is the result, says the Country Gentleman. In contrast with these ineglected orchards, are a few to which the owners give the best atten tion, and who receivs good prices for the copious returns of handsome fruit One orchard of this class, which has grown to full bearing size, affords the wner a handsome profit every year while his careless neighbors receive no more than one-fourth of his returns Phis well-managed orchard is kept in rass, which is grazed short by sheep, the grass afforded them being only one half or two-thirds as much as would give them full feed, the deficiency being made up with grain or meal. This is fed to them regularly in long broad roughs. The sheep eat every worm

Fifteen Thousand Dollars

Seems like a large sum for one firm to have invested in readymade Clothing in Gettysburg.

It is true, nevertheless, and as the senior member of the firm wishes to withdraw and that they may turn this into good hard cash, Stine & Son are selling their entire stock off at cost.

Just step in and examine goods and learn prices.
